According to PA DEP, more than 50 percent of Lancaster County's 1,400 miles of streams are impaired. Currently, watershed groups, the Lancaster County Conservation District, and private developers are working to stabilize Lancaster County streambanks.

Before you decide on a specific streambank restoration technique, identify the cause of the problem you wish to address and consider the most appropriate stabilization approach.